If there is ever a dull month in Richmond, or if the absence of many well-known people from the city renders any time dull by comparison, August is the month and this is the time.

All up and down the residence portion of the city, closed doors and windows indicate the "summer swallows" have taken their flight and that, until Seriember issues her home call, solety will find its full measure of enjoyment elsewhere, in the varying forms of amusement offered in this State and outside of it, wherever Virginia people may happen to be.

Bright Days at Otterhum.

Bright Days at Otterburn, St. Swithin is not a favorite at the summer resorts this season, although the name of this patron saint has been on everyone's tongue as the "rain it raineth ceaselessly." There has been the proverbial bright side to these dark days, however, at Otterburn, and the guests
driven from the outside world have gathered in the rotunda for whist and cuchre.
There are a number of champions here,
and whist, with them a game of science,
proves awe-inspiring to the uninitiated
onlooker.

Six-handed euchre is much favored,
while the younger set grow jolly over Bright Days at Otterburn, six-handed euchre is much favored, while the younger set grow jolly over "pit" or flinch. Still the saint is not altogether unkind, since there has been hardly a day that the sun did not shine sufficient to dry the pathway to the spring so the guests could ramble through freshly bathed woodland to drink of this far-famed water.

Up-to-Date Auction.

An auction was held in the notel rotunda on Wednesday, which outrivalled all past venduo sales on record. Those attending were not only entertained by an exuberatice of verbosity on the part of the auctioneer, but were furnished the cash to bid with as well. With fate so propitious, there could be nothing but smiles and satisfaction, even if some faded away as a superbly libeled bon-bon-box, or dainty, ribbon-tied package was found to contain only a crude specimen of the National fruit of "Ould Brin," or a Chou bouquet. Some of the purchases proved most ludierous, as was attested by a gentleman, who bidding for a pack. proved most ludicrous, as was attested by a gentleman, who, bidding for a pack-age which the auctioneer announced to feel and smell like codfish, found in his possession an article of ladies' wearing apparei. Mr. H. K. Franklin, of Rich-mond, who kindly acted as auctioneer for the occasion, was so pleased with his quick reales and prompt payments that he thinks of adopting this new method in his real estate business in the future.
